Chamber sees reason for optimism on Alaska budget

✍ Author: Curtis Thayer ⌚ Updated: February 20 📅 Published February 20

(Alaska Dispatch News)

Having spent time in Juneau at the beginning of the legislative session for the Alaska Chamber's annual Legislative Fly-In, I'm pleased to see that my enthusiasm for 2017 is reflected in the halls of the state Capitol. There are some optimistic new faces in Juneau this year. And I saw confident, determined looks on the faces of veteran legislators.

Impact to economy from taxes

Alaska is currently in a recession. In response, Alaska's private sector is investing less and laying off workers, and Alaska has the highest unemployment rate in the country. At the same time, there are proposals in the legislature to close the state's budget deficit through five hundred million to one billion dollars in new taxes on businesses and individuals. Do you think adding new taxes on the private sector will have a positive, negative, or neutral impact on Alaska's economy?

Spending Cap

There is currently a proposal to get an initiative on the ballot before voters. The initiative would put in place a spending cap for state spending. The spending cap level would be tied to the consumer price index. If passed, state spending each year could not exceed the spending cap. Is this an initiative that you would most likely support or oppose?
