Letter from the CHAIR

How Committed Area You? He Kayaked across the Atlantic Ocean 3 times.

When I first read the headlines from The New York Times article dated March 22, 2018, "Why He Kayaked Across the Atlantic at 70 (for the Third Time)" I thought, "Really?! This has to be a joke!" As I read the article, it outlined the story of Doba, a Polish man who actually kayaked the Atlantic Ocean 3 different times. Can you imagine the training necessary to prepare himself physically? Plus the mental focus he needed to survive alone at sea for over 143 days is unimaginable.

Fortunately, we don't have that type of a challenge ahead of us. However, each of us want to pursue better things for our business or organization. Regardless of the size of our goals or commitments, there is still a price to pay. We must prepare ourselves mentally and take real action to see results. But the upside is we don't always have to do it alone.

The chamber is a great place to collaborate with other leaders who may be trying to achieve the same type of goals or better yet, have already accomplished them. We can network together and help each other. Let's not be on an "island" by ourselves. No matter the obstacle ahead or the goal you've set, commit yourself to partnering with others - it makes the journey less lonely.

Jennifer Wilson
Strengths-Based Leadership

Jennifer has a passion for leadership. As an education executive for more than 10 years, Jennifer is known for responsible decision making, building relationships and developing people. Jennifer began using the Clifton StrengthsFinder in 2009 to enhance her own leadership abilities. Self-awareness and self-management are foundational to engagement at work and maintaining an excellent quality of life. She learned that one of the greatest assets a leader can have is a genuine understanding of their own natural talents and abilities and how they use them to relate to those around them. The effectiveness of a team lies within each person on the team. Through the strengths-based approach, individuals and teams can truly reach their full potential.

ROACC Chair Scott Fuller and
Speaker Jennifer Wilson

Team Success! A strengths-based team is a group of imperfect but talented contributors valued for their strengths, who need one another to realize individual and team excellence.

- We know and intentionally use our unique talents and strengths
- We know and appreciate each other's strengths.
- We combine our strengths with those of others on our team to achieve success.

The key to success is to fully understand how to apply your greatest talents and strengths in your everyday life.
