CHAIR OF THE BOARD REPORT

Dear Colleagues,

I wish to express my sincere thanks for your dedication, hard work, and sensitivity to the mission of Community Colleges for International Development. Together, we have had a successful year and have met many challenges in striving to build global relationships — relationships that strengthen educational programs and promote economic development.

While meeting challenges within the organization, we have also dealt with national dilemmas such as an economic recession, significant cuts in most states to public higher education, bankruptcies of corporate giants amid charges of greed, and the shattering of a collective sense of security on September 11, 2001. In an increasingly complicated and interconnected world, it is vital that CCID and its members join hands to make a difference — a unity that is exemplified in the recent rescue of nine coal miners in Pennsylvania. Engineering capability, family prayers, and a community pulling together resulted in a positive outcome toward a common cause.

This is and will continue to be the mission of the nation's community colleges — replacing despair with hope in the lives of thousands of people through education tailored to their needs. From our inner strength as educational institutions, we help grow economies and touch the lives of countless individuals who find employment or better paying jobs. CCID has made and will continue to make a difference globally by assisting these colleges as they educate a highly-skilled, technically-trained, flexible workforce that will help our world grow and flourish.

The real basis on which any area prospers depends upon it people — on the knowledge, skills, attitudes, and values possessed by its people. It is the purpose of CCID to nurture people across the globe, form partnerships to connect them, and in turn, watch the world become a better place in which to live.

Thanks,

Clyde Muse, President
Hinds Community College

The Executive Committee

The goal of the Executive Committee is to meet monthly, and provide a sounding board for the Executive Offices. They also provide a forum to keep the board of directors informed about direction and decisions. This past year the Executive Committee conferred via telephone seven times, and met at two board meetings. They provided valuable direction with regard to the IED training that took place at the Summer Institute in Anaheim, California, and also with regard to many other issues. Their dedication is exemplary and much appreciated.

The Board of Directors

The CCID Board of Directors met on their two designated occasions – at the Annual Conference and at the Summer Institute. They welcomed the following colleges into the ranks of CCID:

Full members

Highline Community College, WA

Affiliate members

Crowder College, MO
Community Colleges of Baltimore County, MD
Barbados Community College, Barbados
Shoreline Community College, WA
Rochester Community and Technical College, MN
Portland Community College, OR

Rich Rutkowski from Green River Community College led a visitation team to Highline Community College, and Dr. Richard Anderson was welcomed to the position of CCID Personal Associate, upon the occasion of his retirement from Waukesha County Technical College, WI.

The Board continues to be engaged and dedicated to the work of CCID, while at the same time not being afraid to review new and innovative roles for the organization.

The View from the Executive Offices

In the Executive Offices, various changes have occurred. The early retirement of Ms. Theresa Mikulas resulted in unexpected challenges, but as the Chinese Proverb indicates, in change can be found opportunity. For CCID this meant that Stacey Koppes, the CCID Student Intern, found her capabilities being stretched – a challenge she faced bravely and successfully. The change also resulted in Ms. Andrea Siebenmann being recruited to CCID in March, 2002. With a Slovak heritage and an M.S. in international development, Andrea is very well suited to CCID’s work, and has brought with her previous international project experience, excellent computer skills and other abilities.

Dr. Lois Bartelme is a very welcome volunteer assistant to CCID. With a Doctorate in Education, she has brought her organizational skills to the CCID database of consultants, comprising nearly 400 names. Lois is re-evaluating the database categories as well as consultant resumes which has resulted in much improved search of names by language capability, country of work experience, and more. This formidable database is increasingly being called upon as CCID is asked to provide experts in numerous overseas projects.
The Year in Review

John Halder, President

I believe that the events of the past year – and specifically September 11th – have made everyone involved in international issues pause, review what they are doing and why. For CCID, like many others, the impact has been profound, since one of the outcomes of last September has been the economic impact, which has in turn reflected on college budgets. The event also provoked an evaluation by colleges of the traditional ways they have been conducting their international business. Despite these tragic and challenging issues, CCID finds itself well positioned:

- As our cost structure as a training provider is lower than many others, by partnering with CCID many international companies reap a lower average cost when bidding on international projects.

- The importance of generating additional income for colleges has never been stronger, and CCID provides that to colleges.

- The importance of providing avenues for internationalizing has never been greater, and CCID meets that objective.

- CCID provides one of the best forums for engaging in dialog with peers about international issues.

- CCID provides training to members in the intricacies of international contracting.

We continue to gain in strength and breadth, and this report will outline some of the ways this has occurred.

Activities and Services

CCID Professional Development Programs
An essential component of a thriving community college is the capability of the institution to provide faculty and staff with professional enrichment programs. CCID assists in this process with the long-standing CCID Professional Development Program. Overall management continues to be provided by Sinclair Community College Marketing Professor, Robert Keener with a committee of International Education Directors.

The 2002 program was delivered by Delaware Technical and Community College, through the expertise of Tony Digenakis, Assistant Vice President for Educational Support. Tony led the group of 34 persons to Turkey and Greece, a program that provided insights into the educational systems in both countries and cultural perspectives. High praises received from the participants imply that the need for such programming merits its continuation. Future plans include cultural programs to the UK (2003) and Italy (2004).

A second programming track, offering experiences in the technical fields is being evaluated at present for introduction to the Board at their next meeting.

Visa Assistance
CCID continues to have authority from the US Department of State to issue the paperwork to faculty from overseas wishing to visit CCID colleges. During the past year we issued IAP-66 visa application for 25 individuals – exactly the same as the previous year. Recent statistics follow:

How long CCID will be able to provide this service is in question. The new and more rigorous tracking (SEVIS) required by the Department of State following September 11th will possibly mean that CCID as an entity cannot take on this responsibility. We continue to monitor the new regulations carefully.

Travel Insurance
During our second full year of providing travel insurance to in- and outbound faculty and staff when requested, we were able to work with 46 persons, substantially less than the 72 of the previous year. This may be a reflection of the decline in travel activity during the past year.

Live Satellite Videoconference
We worked with colleagues from sister organizations – AACC and ACIE to produce our second live satellite videoconference. The Stanley Foundation again provided seed funds, allowing the production of "Managing Risk and Liability in International Programs." Directly received by approximately 100 downlink sites across the nation, the count indicated that viewers numbered around one thousand.

Werner Kubsch Award
Despite requesting submissions, the Werner Kubsch Award for excellence in international education was not given this past year, due to a very low response rate. The regular solicitation will take place this coming year.

Annual Conference
The Annual Conference took place in Tampa, Florida and was hosted by Hillsborough Community College. Prior to September 11th we had anticipated an attendance of over 350, especially since this was the 25th "Silver Anniversary" conference. In the circumstances a very acceptable attendance of approximately 270 persons was the final count. Sterling efforts by Dr. Gwen Stephenson, President of Hillsborough, and her staff helped to make these numbers possible. Special mention must be made of Michael Brennan, International Education Director, who worked long hours to make the results so acceptable.

A very well received segment of the program was a retrospective view of CCID, as seen through the eyes of the founding chairperson Dr. Max King, and three previous Executive Directors – Jim Humphrys, Dr. Al Koller, and Bob Ludwiczak. A standing only room crowd listened to anecdotes and stories from 25 years of community college development work.

Another aspect of the Annual Conference that has become a standing feature is the Sy Fersh Memorial Lecture, given each year in memory of the well-known educator and internationalist, Sy Fersh. His widow Harriet graced the event, and arranged for the Scholar from New Delhi, India, Ms Sharada Nayak to present the lecture on “The Conflict Within: Contending Cultures.” Ms Nayak is the former Executive Director of the US Educational Foundation, and today manages the Educational Resources Centre, a non-profit trust of which she is the director and managing trustee.

Summer Institute
The Summer Institute was hosted by the University of Hawaii Community Colleges, and used the venue of the East West Center, Honolulu. This year the institute was combined with the 5th Seminar for Presidents of Junior and Community Colleges, Japan.

International Education Directors
The driving force behind many CCID projects are the International Education Directors of the full Member colleges, and they deserve acknowledgement for the time they expend on international activities, conferences, meetings, training, mentoring, etc.

of Hinds Community College. Tony Digenakis and Bob Keener managed faculty development programs this year.

International Education Director Training
The niche that CCID occupies is international contract training, so this is the field in which we train the members. We continue to believe that professional training of International Education Directors is a key function that CCID can provide. A committee of International Education Directors has been the driving force behind this initiative, chaired by Tony Digenakis of Delaware Technical and Community College.

The mentoring of IEDs continues to be a high priority and one that we take seriously. All directors are given the opportunity to participate in mentoring activities.

The CCID Website
This has been redesigned during the past year by Andrea Siebenmann, and is hopefully more user friendly. The new pages, and especially the Members Only password accessible section, continues to provide valuable resources to the membership. Access to the website is from http://ccid.kirkwood.cc.ia.us while the member only area can be reached by obtaining the password from the Executive Office 319/398-1257 or from ccid@kirkwood.cc.ia.us.

This group of professionals responded to frequent calls to action from the Executive Offices, and deserve much credit for taking on CCID activities over and beyond their other duties.

The International Education Directors of the Affiliate colleges are too numerous to mention, but many of them also respond to RFP's and other project initiatives, for which the Executive Offices are extremely grateful.

Many IEDs took on special responsibilities. Traditionally, the IED of the Board of Directors chairperson becomes the deputy chair of the IED Committee, and that was performed by Adam Murray
